

We are hiking the Rocky Mountain's fourteeners to raise money for World Central Kitchen

Miles Foxworth • July 11, 2023

Doing the right thing is in our DNA and we strive to help support not only our local communities, but also communities around the world. We recognize the importance of engaging with one global charity that we can all rally behind to support and get involved with, no matter where we are located. This year we've selected World Central Kitchen (WCK), a non-profit organization, as our charity partner.

WCK is an organization that is first to the frontlines providing fresh meals in response to crises, while working to build resilient food systems with locally led solutions. Thus far, WCK has served more than 300 million nourishing meals around the world.

One way we support our charity partners is through employee-led fundraising. With that said, we're excited to announce that we're embarking on a journey to conquer three or more Colorado Fourteeners (mountains with peaks at over 14,000 feet in elevation) while making a positive impact on the world. This Beazley initiative brings together mountain and hiking enthusiasts to raise money for a worthy cause. Our staff and brokers will come together on August 11-13 for a memorable adventure in the Colorado Rockies for our annual Beazley Challenge. Including Mt. Harvard, with the option to include Mt. Columbia, Mt. Yale, and Mt. Princeton, these hikes are no joke. This exhilarating adventure will not only test our limits but also raise funds for World Central Kitchen.

Our goal is to raise $10,000, and the amount raised will be generously matched by Beazley.

If you are interested in supporting our cause, you are welcome to donate by going to our fundraiser page:
